

Arrangements for Lone Working (Simplified Version)

Lone working is avoided whenever possible. If someone must work alone, they receive proper training so they can do their job safely. Lone workers are supervised and monitored even though they are physically alone. Reliable communication systems must always be available, such as phones or radios. Lone workers must also know how to respond correctly in emergencies.

This summary is based on the provided document extract.